Subsidized Employment Can Help you Build Your Business While Job Candidates Learn In-Demand Skills! Contact the American Job Center near You to Get Started!

Subsidized employment programs invests public funds for jobs for people by paying all or some of their wages. This can be beneficial for both the employers as well as job seekers who can build their on-the-job skills. The employer gets more work done, and the employee gains work experience and real life skills to better position them for full time employment.

Wages and benefits are paid directly to employees through the American Job Center!
